

The Vagia Sunday

Vagia was shown around on the Vagia Sunday in some villages of Thrace, especially in Evros. Vagia was a doll made of a cylindrical piece of wood, a part of the loom. The girls of the village dressed the doll in the traditional costume on Saturday. The next day, after going to church, they walked from one house to another showing the doll and singing the same songs they sang the previous day but faster.

Dimitris Vrachiologlou: Patterns of popular culture in Thrace and Evros: From yesterday to today. Alexandroupolis, 1999.